New best-of album for the band's 25th birthday

Scallwags

Celebrating Rock'n'Roll since 1996

1996, two old Spaniards dominate the charts with their song "Macarena", Rio Reiser dies and the Ramones break up after 22 years. The Scallwags are founded at a time when punk rock is not exactly on the rise. But the four guys from Schweinfurt don't care about trends. Trends come and go, Scallwags stay.

And so, an incredible 25 years later, they are still making punk rock with a lot of rock'n'roll. With loud guitars, great solos and an unmistakable feeling for catchy melodies that get stuck in your head.

Scallwags play countless concerts in the 25 years and release about 100 songs. A demo tape from the early days is followed by six studio albums, a first "best of" on vinyl and many sampler contributions in Germany, Spain and Japan. Together with friends from the Schweinfurt and Würzburg musician and artist scene, they do everything themselves - organize concerts, write songs, record, design and release records - always with a lot of heart and soul and professional claim.

To celebrate their silver wedding anniversary, Scallwags are releasing a vinyl LP. A "best of" the last three albums including two new songs that the band recorded during the Corona Lockdown time in the studio of their bass player, Michael Simon. After 25 years a novelty for Scallwags, this time the vinyl record is released in cooperation with the Duisburg label "Wolverine Records".

Let's hope that the band anniversary can be celebrated with some concerts this year. Because Scallwags are notorious for their sweaty live shows. They don't just play rock'n'roll, they celebrate it!
